

I would like to see the sale of Voom to Echostar. Voom has the technology that is needed for the future of DTV/HDTV, but lack the service experience that a larger company can provide. Their installation service and customer service reps are the worst from what I have seen between the 3 DBS companies and they need the background and history that the larger, more established company can provide.